In this highly readable and provocative book, David Carrier, a philosopher and art historian, does not attempt to write a world art history himself. Rather, he asks the question of how an art history of all cultures could be written-or whether it is even possible to do so. He also engages the political and moral issues raised by the idea of a ...

Unlike most books that classify themselves as "readers" (collections of writings about a subject) this one goes for long extracts. Most readers of this length feature a lot of short extracts (something like Art and its Histories edited by Steve Edwards, which was used on the same Open University course and has 89 texts in less pages) .
